

Dr. Sathyanarayana:

Topic : Experiences & Lessons Learnt

Dr Sathyanarayana is presently working as Associate Professor-Public Health Foundation of India, Indian Institute of Public Health-Bangalore Campus.

Dr. Sathyanarayana is a medical doctor; he has done MBBS from Karnataka state, MBA in health management and MPH from University College London and PhD in Health Policy from University College London. He served for 6 years in World Health Organization as surveillance medical officer for polio eradication program in Uttar Pradesh, Bihar, and Andhra Pradesh and in Karnataka states of India. Prior to this he served as district leprosy medical officer for two years. As surveillance medical officer, he made special innovative efforts to strengthen routine immunization in Karnataka state and actively participated to begin measles surveillance program in Karnataka state.

Currently he is teaching health policy-planning and health care quality modules at Indian Institute of Public Health-Bangalore campus, India. His, research interests are on evidence for Universal Health Care, Health Policy And Systems Research and health policy transfer between national and international jurisdictions, especially in relation to local, regional and global health care and health care policies to create sustainable, integrated, patient focused health care system.

His Areas of interest:

Methods: Health policy analysis methods, mixed methods; political-social-institutional analysis; health impact evaluation.

Areas: Health systems and policy research, Universal health care research; evidence/role of PPPs in social health insurance; Vaccine policies; Traditional medicine policies.