

Aseem Prakash is Professor and currently the Chairperson, School of Governance and Public Policy, Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Hyderabad. Aseem has more than 15 years of experience in research and teaching which also includes a stint at the University of Oxford as a Fell Fund Fellow. Aseem has been instrumental in laying the intellectual foundation of the School of Public Policy and Governance including designing the course curriculum of the M.A. in Public Policy and Governance Programme (PPG) at TISS.

Prior to joining TISS, Aseem was part of the two member team which established the first Public Policy school in India- Jindal School of Government and Public Policy. Aseem was also invited by the UNDP and Department of Planning, Government of Maldives to prepare a rubric for the first ever Maldives Institute of Policy Studies in Male, Maldives.

Aseem has completed over a dozen big research projects for various international and national donors. His research interests include the interface between the state and markets; regulation and institutions; sociology of markets, social discrimination, human development. Currently, Aseem's research efforts are focused on two research projects: "Regulation of Small Town Capitalism" and "Cities, Social History and Muslim Entrepreneurs".

His most recent books are titled Dalit Capital: State, Markets and Civil Society in Urban India; published by Routledge (2015) and The Indian Middle Class (co-authored with Surinder Jodhka), published by Oxford University Press (2016).

Aseem is a compulsive follower of political gossip and likes discussing it with people who can make sense of it. He believes that he would have been more content and happy if he had pursued a career in sports. Aseem earned his doctorate from the Centre for Political Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi.